Summary

An expert and website developer specializing in web design and development. I have advanced technical skills and in-depth knowledge of programming languages and development tools necessary to build modern websites and web applications. Transform your visualizations and requirements into functional and attractive web interfaces. It also pays attention to user experience design and seeks to achieve compatibility, accessibility, and security in all the elements it builds. Master basic web languages such as HTML, CSS, Bootstrap and use them to build and format page structures. In addition, master back-end programming languages such as JavaScript, C, C++, and C# to add dynamic and interactive functionality to websites. Work on popular frameworks like Angular and use them to facilitate the development of complex user interfaces and achieve a seamless user experience. I also work with databases and server technology such as SQL Server. Use these technologies to store and manage site-specific data and enable connectivity to servers.
